American And British Troops Occupy Entire Murman Coast Of Russia As First Movement

LONDON, Eng., July 15.—American and British troops have occupied the whole of the Murman coast in northern Russia, says a dispatch from Moscow to the Central News agency by way of Amsterdam.

After capturing Kem, a railroad station on the White sea coast, the dispatch adds, the American and British forces advanced toward Torok, the Russian Bolshevik forces having withdrawn to Nork.

The commanders of the allied forces have issued an appeal to the population on the Murman coast requesting help against German and Finnish. It is declared that the Murman coast is Russian territory under the protection of the entente powers.

The allies already had a base on Murman coast of Finland, the city of Kola, and had taken possession of Archangel and much of the Archangel railroad (Murman coast of Russia). In addition, along which line great supplies of war materials are assembled in cars.

These supplies were shipped by the allies to Russia before the Bolshevik came into power and Russia dropped out of the war, and it is highly important to the allies that the supplies should not fall into the hands of the Germans, who are exceedingly anxious to get them.

German Marching North.
A large force of Finns and German troops has been reported marching north from the vicinity of Helsinki, apparently to attack the allied troops.

On the other hand, the allied forces have been strengthened by the arrival of some thousands of inhabitants in the Murman region.

EVERY MAN HAS A RIGHT TO BELONG TO A COUNTRY
BY THEODORE ROOSEVELT.
EVERY man ought to love his country. If he does not love his country and is not eager to serve her, he is a worthless creature and should be contemptuously thrown out of the country when possible, and at any rate debarred from all rights of citizenship in the country. He is only entitled to one country. If he claims loyalty to two countries, he is necessarily a traitor to at least one country.

BY THEODORE ROOSEVELT.
The crew of the torpedo destroyer who faces the submarine and the airmen of the battle planes who live in peril every hour, and the infantry dogfights and marines who stand the killing and suffer the grueling hardships and misery of the line fighting all alike, number in their ranks relatively just as many Americans of German as of any other blood. Anyone can see this who will look over the lists of casualties and the list of men cited for deeds of high gallantry.

BY THEODORE ROOSEVELT.
The very worst enemies of these Americans have been the traitors and dupes of traitors who have been during the last few years the leaders of the German-American alliance and of the newspapers in German or English which have backed up the alliance and similar organizations. The dissolution by law of the alliance and the gradual change of German newspapers into newspapers published in English will be of benefit to true Americans of German blood more than any other of our citizens. The duties of other blood must remember that the man who in good faith and without reservations gives up another country for this must in return receive exactly the same rights, not merely legal, but social and spiritual, that other Americans proudly possess. We of the United States belong to a new and separate nationality. We are all Americans and nothing and nothing without regard to his birthplace, creed or national origin is entitled to exactly the same rights as all other Americans.—(Copyright, 1918, The Kansas City Star.)

GERMAN IDEALISM OF AMERICA

BARRAGE BREAKS UP ENEMY'S ASSAULT IN NEW BIG OFFENSIVE

GERMANS ARE DOMBARDING AND MAKING HARD INFANTRY ATTACK

Americans Make Advance of 700 Yards but Are Subsequently Obligated to Make Strategic Withdrawal to Previous Positions; French Lines Are Holding Well Against the Enemy's Assaults.

WITH the American Army on the Marne, July 15.—(By the Associated Press.)—Reports from Vaux at 1:05 o'clock this afternoon indicate that the Americans have extended their lines in the region near Vaux, in proceeding against the German offensive which was renewed on a front of more than 50 miles, including the Champagne district and the city of Reims.

While the Americans were making a little at Vaux, they at Chateau Thierry were fighting and dying in their tracks and those at the right of the line were forced to withdraw slightly in a strategic movement.

At Vaux, the advance was approximately 700 yards, but the Americans subsequently withdrew to their original line for strategic reasons. The American barrage lines broke up the enemy's assault and drove them back in confusion.

French Line Is Holding.
Paris, France, July 15.—The French line is holding, according to Lieut. Col. Rossel, writing in Liberté. He declares the Champagne district is the scene of France's national holiday in order to effect a surprise, but failed miserably in that particular.

"Our army in the Champagne is sustaining the attack with the valor it already has shown so often in the same region."

"The Champagne attack was accompanied by a diversion on the Ourcq front which our troops checked very rapidly."

German Gain Little Ground.
"At 5 o'clock this morning the combat was still in progress along the parallel of the bottom of departure. Hence the overwhelming success which characterized Ludendorff's previous offensive on the first day of the attack."

"It was between Dormans and Reims that the enemy threw the greatest masses of his forces this morning, seeking to cross the Marne. Reims appears to be to be outside the enemy's attack. Upon the rest of the front of battle we are holding in the face of our advance guards."

HUGE NAVAL GUNS POUND ALLIES BEFORE GERMANS REVEAL ATTACK
PARIS, France, July 15.—A new offensive by the Germans was begun last night in the region between Reims and the Argonne.

On the front between Chateau Thierry and the Marne de Mass, the Germans attacked this morning, the war office announced. The French are meeting the attack with energy and the battle continues.

The struggle is proceeding on a front of approximately 50 miles. The statement follows:

"After intense bombardment the Germans attacked this morning in the region of Chateau Thierry. The French troops are meeting the assault of the enemy on a front of about 50 kilometers. The battle is in progress."

Official reports relative to the grand offensive show that it is the most ambitious attack since 1914, when the Germans launched their attack against the British lines from the vicinity of Arras in La Fere.
